NEW COMMITMENTS TO LUTHER IN FISCAL YEAR 2020–21

Dear Members of the Luther College Community,

It’s a joy to share this annual Impact of Giving report following an academic year that has stretched the Luther community in ways we couldn’t have even imagined prior to COVID-19. Despite the challenges and uncertainties we faced, the college continued to garner strong support from you—our most enthusiastic and steadfast donors—to ensure Luther students received the best possible educational experience. All while being community in new ways.

Amid the pressures of the pandemic, the past year presented a unique opportunity to undertake a generative and future-focused exercise at a time when optimism was of the utmost importance. As I continue to shape my vision for Luther’s future in conversation with key stakeholders, four themes have begun to resonate—namely stewardship; integration, coherence, and focus; adaptability; and grounded and global. You will note that stewardship tops the list. For me, this concept of “caring for” is a common denominator in Luther’s mission, history, values, and programmatic strengths. Stewardship is a guiding principle that is authentically Luther—it is at the very heart of our relationship with those of you who invest your gifts and resources here. And that’s why we’re eager to share stories of the resounding impact your generous contributions make at Luther.

Whether giving during your lifetime or as part of your estate (or both!), these commitments at all levels are combined to strengthen the college both now and in the future. This report highlights some of the boundless ways donor support made a meaningful impact in the past year by touching the lives of Luther students, faculty, and staff. Your generosity shines brightly, and our campus community will continue to be joyful stewards.

My gratitude and my optimism are abundant—thank you!

Dr. Jenifer K. Ward

Luther makes strong nurses, and this year, when it launches an expanded and upgraded Nursing Simulation Center (NSC), it will be able to send new nurses into the world even better prepared to be leaders in providing high-quality health care.

Simulation labs allow student nurses to safely prepare to practice nursing in a way that’s as realistic as possible. In the midst of the current U.S. nursing shortage, when preceptors and clinical sites aren’t as available for educating new nurses, simulation labs are critical spaces that allow students to practice highly technical skills and, in Luther’s case, to develop complex clinical judgment, communication, and patient advocacy skills, as well as learn approaches to care for diverse patients and families.

“A common misconception is that nursing is very task-oriented and that nurses use only menial skills, when the reality is that nurses are at the forefront of keeping patients alive and safe,” says Jayme (Rutledge) Nelson ’87, associate professor of nursing. At its lowest level, she says, the new center can be used as simply a technical skills-trainer. But at its best, it will offer students a highly contextualized, complex, ever-changing environment that closely mimics what nurses encounter in real life.

The NSC will offer eight additional simulation manikins that emulate human patients—they even respond verbally. It also takes the current lab from two separate theatre-style spaces (with students watching peers administer care) to a much more realistic setup that includes three distinct patient rooms to approximate part of a hospital or care floor. This way, a student can experience—and troubleshoot in real time—what it’s like to perform a health assessment on one patient while another patient’s alarms start going off and a third also needs assistance. “Any opportunity where we can allow students to be interrupted and stimulated in ways that are really similar to current nursing practice will increase the safety for them to be professionals in those roles,” says Angela (Oldenburg) Kueny ’02, associate professor of nursing.

The new center will also include audio-visual equipment to record simulations and allow faculty and students to highlight things that went well or find opportunities to improve. This capability—of reviewing and course-correcting patient care in a way that doesn’t put actual patients at risk—is a true strength of a good simulation lab. Kate (Haller) Ailabouni ’10, who graduated with a Luther nursing degree in May, had the chance to practice with four of the new manikins, which were purchased with institutional funds in fall 2020. She works as an obstetrics nurse and says, “The simulation lab and the manikins are a safe space for error, reflection, and correction. As called as we might feel to the field of nursing, patient care comes with a huge weight of responsibility. It is so crucial we rehearse what this might feel like with the simulation manikins before we hit the big stage of board-certified RN life!”

Especially in a nursing shortage, not to mention a pandemic, the quality of a future nurse’s preparation depends in part on the quality of their simulation lab. Luther—and future patients and employers of Luther-educated nurses—is incredibly lucky that its donors recognize that essential need.
The vision for a comprehensive Nursing Simulation Center is becoming a reality thanks to the combined generosity of the Roy J. Carver Charitable Trust; the estate of Shirley (Klingsheim) Bentdahl ’59; and $100,000 in board-designated bequests; along with gifts from alumni, current parents, and friends of the college. It will also be supported by the endowment for nursing simulation created by Michael ’99 and Carryn (Ensrude) Anderson ’99 in 2013.
Luther’s passionate alumni network is one of its greatest assets. This is also true when it comes to recruiting the next generation of Luther students.

The Future Norse program lets alumni and parents of Luther students (current and past) refer a high school student to Luther. Every student they refer receives a $1,000 scholarship in their name each year, for four years, when they enroll at Luther.

Robbie Smalling ’02, a high school Spanish teacher in Orono, Minn., has been involved with the Future Norse program since its beginning. Whenever a student expresses interest in Luther, he submits a referral. “It took me ten years of going back to Luther after graduating not to feel jealous as heck of people still on campus every time I did,” he says. “I loved my experience there and would love to point kids in that direction as well.”

No amount of words could ever thank you for your generous donations. The amount of knowledge (not only academically, but social skills, personal discoveries, and new views of our world) I have gained as a student at Luther is more than I could ever have asked for.”

Thank you so much for the blessing of my scholarship. My family is grateful as well. As a first-year student, it was especially hard this year, and to know that others around me are supporting my endeavors and desire to gain an education—so I can truly change and impact the world around me—is amazing and truly inspiring.”

Luther College Endowment

Endowment is the foundation on which Luther College sustains academic excellence for future generations of students, faculty, and staff. Luther's endowment has grown from $56 million in 2000 to $203 million in 2021. Our institutional goal is to continue growing the endowment—for scholarships, applied learning opportunities, research fellowships, programs, professorships, and chairs—to enhance the resources necessary to support Luther’s mission and vision. Each year a spending allowance is determined by the Luther College Board of Regents. All funds exist in perpetuity.

ENDOWMENT RETURNS:

1 YEAR  =  27.4%
3 YEAR  =  10.5%
5 YEAR  =  10.2%

ENDOWMENT VALUE (UNAUDITED) AS OF MAY 31, 2021

$203,973,013
As Luther’s endowment surpasses $200 million, the college has started to bring its investment strategy into closer alignment with its mission to work toward the common good. Moving forward, Luther plans to adopt a socially responsible investing (SRI) strategy and incorporate environmental, social, and governance (ESG) considerations into its investment approach.

Luther has already made revisions to its investment policy statement to recognize new SRI goals and hired a manager with an investment strategy built around ESG factors. The college has also shifted away from asset allocation in natural resources and moved into infrastructure.

While a commitment to SRI principles will allow Luther to more conscientiously grow its endowment, portfolio management decisions will continue to be made with long-term return and support of the college as a primary objective. Ultimately, this will allow us to offer more transformational experiences to students while also committing to an investment strategy that aligns with our environmental, social, and other values.

Visual media manager Nick Bjerke (left) guides Armando Jenkins-Vazquez ’22 (center) as he records an interview with education major Megan Priest ’23. Megan is conducting research with professor Jodi Meyer-Mork toward developing an alternative to the Common Core curriculum. With the support of the Luther community behind them, students like Megan and Armando are learning at Luther in ways that will help them shape their future.
In 1964, incoming Luther students could participate in a Guaranteed Cost Program, which fixed annual tuition, room, and board at $1,700 for all four years. Like many with limited means to attend college, Bob ’68 and Dell Ann (Kappus) Sathe ’68 relied on the program to help them afford the investment in college.

Since graduating in 1968, the necessary investment for a college education has risen significantly faster than inflation. With that in mind, Bob and Dell Ann decided to help Luther students with financial need by funding new scholarships.

The Sathes have always had a special interest in education and in helping less fortunate students succeed. Their philanthropic interests at Luther are focused on education and the arts, but in recent years, directing support to scholarship endowment has become increasingly important.

“With help from Paul Mullen ’79 and the Development staff, we designed a program that provides gap funding to help defray tuition costs,” Bob says. “It’s our way of saying thanks to Luther for helping us with a foundation for a good life.”

Bob and Dell Ann’s gift in support of scholarship was used to create the Robert and Dell Ann Sathe Scholars Endowments, comprising four separate funds, each designed to help qualified underrepresented (such as first-generation or low-income) students with demonstrated financial need afford the Luther experience. Students began receiving scholarship awards in the 2018–19 academic year.

Scholarship recipient Samuel Zegler-Evans ’24—a sophomore from Topock, Arizona, majoring in nursing—is beyond grateful. “Thanks to the Sathes’ amazing support, I’m able to pursue my dreams as a young adult who will graduate from college,” he says. “Not only do I get the opportunity to receive a highly respected degree at Luther College, but I am able to create relationships and memories and encounter lessons that I will cherish for the rest of my life.”
The generosity of Luther donors takes many shapes, including novel gifts of specialty musical instruments. These gifts in kind have been put to immediate use, allowing students to increase their repertoires and practice and performance opportunities.

In January, Karla (Lenzen) Bach ’00 arranged to donate her W&W Venus Harp, Encore 75 Concert Pedal, circa 1993. It was delivered to campus in February, where Daniel Baldwin, director of orchestral activities, was on hand to accept it.

“Karla’s beautiful instrument will live in the Center for Faith and Life, the space in which our large ensembles perform. Her gift will serve to protect all our college-owned harps from physical damage during transport, and will ensure that our student harpists have access to an artist-quality instrument wherever and whenever they play,” says Baldwin.

A 1996 Steinway M grand piano that was a focal point in the home of Lance ’79 and Shari Vander Linden is now part of Luther’s keyboard collection.

“Because of Dr. Diggelmann’s generosity, students will be able to apply their talents to the baroque and early classical repertoire for trumpet, which will help to broaden their performance capabilities and historical understanding. We are extremely grateful for this donation and will benefit from it for many years to come,” says Cord.

Associate professor of music John Cord met Henry “Hank” Diggelmann when both were studying at the University of Iowa. After learning that his friend was teaching at Luther, Dr. Diggelmann reached out to ask if Luther would accept an in-kind donation of his instruments, a Johannes Scherzer piccolo trumpet, Bach Stradivarius B-flat trumpet, and a Bach Stradivarius C trumpetto.

“Because of Dr. Diggelmann’s generosity, students will be able to apply their talents to the baroque and early classical repertoire for trumpet, which will help to broaden their performance capabilities and historical understanding. We are extremely grateful for this donation and will benefit from it for many years to come,” says Cord.

Gifts to the Norse Athletic Association support a quality Division III athletics department. As the costs of providing competitive opportunities for our student-athletes continue to rise, your support enables us to provide programs that encourage both academic and athletic success.
Luther held its first annual One Team Day, a one-day fundraising event to support the college’s student-athletes, in November 2020. The campaign raised over $300,000 from more than 2,000 donors. The funds raised during that day support Luther’s 19 intercollegiate teams and 500 student-athletes.

One Team Day highlights the importance of athletics and student-athletes within the Luther community. Last year, in order to continue to allow students to participate in college-level sports, Luther’s athletics program enacted special pandemic-related protocols. All student-athletes were tested for COVID-19 when they arrived on campus and were tested at random throughout the fall, winter, and spring. By following the safety precautions established by the American Rivers Conference and the college, all Norse teams were able to complete their modified ARC conference schedules in every sport—much to the credit of Luther’s dedicated student-athletes and coaching staff.

“The funds given on One Team Day allow us to upgrade the playing surface at our field. The dirt mixture will now be of much higher quality, improving the field’s playability.”

At Luther, we help students shape an education that matters. We collaborate to turn ideas, passions, and talents into building blocks for a bright future. This is where students build their biggest dreams, and together we equip them to build a future more incredible than they could have imagined.

The Luther College Heritage Club, nearly 1,300 members strong, is an association of persons with the vision and inclination to build bigger dreams for future Luther students, ensuring generations to come will benefit from a truly transformational Luther education.

The Heritage Club is also a symbol and an inspiration. Because planned gifts are so vitally important to the future of Luther College, and because membership in the club is only for those persons who have made planned gifts, the Heritage Club is a symbol of the importance Luther places on this kind of commitment. It also serves as an inspiration for others to make similar gifts and join this important group. The Heritage Club is one way Luther says “thank you” to all those who have made the college a part of their future. We are extremely grateful for the support from the members of Luther’s Heritage Club.

"Giving back has always been important to us. We have both been very blessed in our life together and feel the need to recognize the gifts we have received by returning something in response. The time will come when we cannot do this on an annual basis, so the establishment of a planned gift will allow us to do this in perpetuity."

The Legacy Trust is an opportunity to invest in the lives of young people who want to study at Luther College.

Luther is committed to providing an affordable education to our students, nearly 100 percent of whom receive some form of financial assistance. Unfortunately, federal aid, student earnings, and parents’ savings are often not enough to cover the whole cost of a Luther education. Now more than ever, scholarship support is critical as students search for ways to meet the rising costs of higher education.

The Legacy Trust was established in 1986—and now more than $110 million in cash and planned gifts has been raised. Thanks to the generosity of our donors, Luther students—most of whom could not otherwise afford to be here—now benefit from nearly 900 endowed scholarships that have been established at Luther.

Though the Legacy Trust was founded as an endowed scholarship program, donors may now also establish annual scholarships with outright gifts through this expanded program.

ALUMNI ENGAGEMENT AND FINANCIAL SUPPORT

Assisted Alumni and Development with engaging alumni and donors virtually and in person

Supported Giving Day
DONOR-FUNDED INTERNSHIPS
For many years, Luther has combined funding from donors and other philanthropic partners to give financial support to students completing a variety of internships. Here’s a sampling of student internships in the past year.

Huong Giang Nguyen ’21, a double major in mathematics/statistics and data science, interned at Mayo Clinic’s Kern Center for the Science of Health Care Delivery, where she helped develop and validate machine learning models for early risk assessments and disease progression based on dynamic data for patients in the Remote Patients Monitoring Program. The experience allowed her to apply her classroom learning to a real clinical situation and, she says, “helped me a lot to define what I want to pursue in the future and what I still need to learn.” She and her mentor cowrote a paper about their research that’s in the publication pipeline. –Recipient of the Career Connections Fund

Sletsy Dlamini ’21, an environmental studies major, interned with the city of Rochester/Destination Medical Center Economic Development Agency. He researched and presented environmental initiatives from around the world to inform his group’s development of resilience strategies for the city going forward. His experience helped grow the way he thinks about sustainability. Environmental, economic, and social sustainability, he says, “are not just stand-alone pieces but things that impact each other and are interconnected.” –Recipient of the Gregg Family Applied Learning Fund

Rida Naz ’21, a double major in management and accounting, interned with Astri Wee Photography, where she helped the company build a bigger audience base, from ideation to posting actual ads. She also worked on a succession plan for interns who will follow her. And because the internship was remote, she says, “I learned a great deal about keeping up good communication and tracking progress to meet our mutual goals on time.” –Recipient of the Ruth Steinmetz Intern Fellowship
Last year didn’t allow for the kind of reunion that many alumni had hoped for. But even when COVID-19 prevented our alumni from getting together on campus, they still came together to support Luther students.

In honor of their connection to Luther and each other, five classes in reunion years stepped up their support. When generous classmates sponsored matching challenges, all five classes rose to the challenge!

We’re grateful for the thoughtful work and frequent pivoting of our reunion committees. We’re also grateful for the steadfast support of reunion classes who continue to step up to support Luther—even when they can’t gather in person.

Receiving alumni-supported financial aid made such a difference not only to my ability to attend Luther, but also to the opportunities I had to become more authentically me. Through the privilege of my Luther experience, this first-generation college student discovered a deeply meaningful life calling and a far-reaching community of friends. By giving a little each month, my hope is that I’m creating space for the next ‘me’ to find that for themselves, too.”

Celebrating firsts

The Luther community, like the rest of the world, shared many firsts over this past uniquely uncertain year. Many of you experienced virtually connecting in new ways necessary for your educational, work, and personal lives, while families and friends navigated the emotions of missing a milestone moment, like a birthday or graduation, or a Luther reunion and Homecoming, for the first time.

However, while there were many tough first-time experiences, there were the hopeful, bright firsts, too, that you made happen. Each gift and generous act of time you gave to Luther sent a message to students that there is a community in their corner, supporting them every step of the way. For a few examples, the sixth annual Giving Day held on March 11 surpassed $1 million for the first time, with more than 2,260 donors participating. The first-ever One Team Day held last November exceeded expectations and sailed past $300,000 for the Norse Athletic Association, honoring the student-athlete experience. And to illustrate the strengthening of the college’s fiscal health for both now and the future, the Luther Fund crested $2.3 million for the first time, while the college’s overall endowment—made possible by your boundless investments from scholarships to academic programs—surpassed the $200 million mark. And amid the current climate this past year, 1,776 of you made your first gift to Luther, ever.

All of these firsts, and so many more, are worth celebrating. Thank you for showing up when the Luther community and students needed you during a time of particular uncertainty. Your generous actions are a sign of faith in each group of Luther graduates and the important work happening at the college that allows them to enter the world with such infinite promise.

Thank you for being there for Luther.

Donor BILL OF RIGHTS

Philanthropy is based on voluntary action for the common good. It is a tradition of giving and sharing that is primary to the quality of life. To assure that philanthropy merits the respect and trust of the general public, and that donors and prospective donors can have full confidence in the not-for-profit organizations and causes they are asked to support, we declare that all donors have these rights:

I To be informed of the organization’s mission, of the way the organization intends to use donated resources, and of its capacity to use donations effectively for their intended purposes.

II To be informed of the identity of those serving on the organization’s governing board, and to expect the board to exercise prudent judgment in its stewardship responsibilities.

III To have access to the organization’s most recent financial statements.

IV To be assured their gifts will be used for the purposes for which they were given.

V To receive appropriate acknowledgment and recognition.

VI To be assured that information about their donations is handled with respect and with confidentiality to the extent provided by law.

VII To expect that all relationships with individuals representing organizations of interest to the donor will be professional in nature.

VIII To be informed whether those seeking donations are volunteers, employees of the organization, or hired solicitors.

IX To have the opportunity for their names to be deleted from mailing lists that an organization may intend to share.

X To feel free to ask questions when making a donation and to receive prompt, truthful, and forthright answers.

The Donor Bill of Rights was created by the Giving Institute, the Association for Healthcare Philanthropy (AHP), the Association of Fundraising Professionals (AFP), and the Council for Advancement and Support of Education (CASE). It has been endorsed by numerous organizations, including Luther College.
